Bringing lived experience to life
co-creating characters and stories on themes
of health, care,
and social justice.

Our Projects

You want to involve the people you serve in your work, to understand their experiences, gather their insights, and inspire meaningful change.

Made By Mortals helps you do exactly that.

Through audio stories, films, and video case studies, we connect your team directly with lived experience groups to co-create authentic, high quality creative content. Our work moves audiences from awareness to action, helping your organisation learn, reflect, and grow through creative storytelling.

“We can trust you to get the inclusion bit of research right. Everybody can participate and feel safe, there’s follow up and feedback, and there are outputs that we can share. It’s that whole package.”

— ARC GM

Video

When you need your audience to truly understand a real person’s experience, not just hear about it, our Video Character Case Studies bring those insights to life.

Step into someone’s world, hear their struggles, strengths, and sources of comfort unfold. Guided by the people who co-created it, your audience will discover lived wisdom, practical understanding, and community centred ideas for change.

They’ll also go behind the scenes to explore how the immersive music and sound design were created, hearing it again through new understanding and renewed energy, as they reflect on the messages that matter most and how they’ll turn them into action.

Ideal for: policy development, training, engagement, or service design, when you want participation to drive empathy and action.

“What an incredible use of media to convey such a powerful message of hope, resilience and positive female community.”

“An innovative and collaborative adventure that will support me to share my research messages to a much broader audience.”

— Dr Amy Russell, Associate Professor, Leeds Institute of Health Sciences

Audio

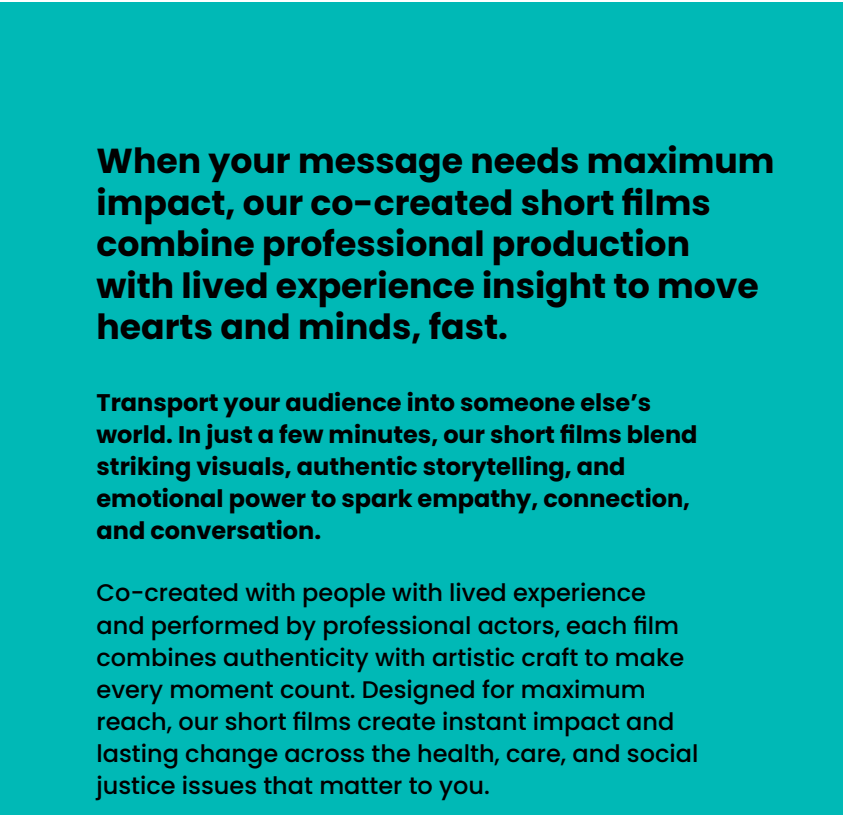

When you need to bring lived experience perspectives into your work, our Audio Stories let audiences walk beside people as they navigate the challenges that shape their lives.

Narrated by the lived experience group that created it, your audience will hear powerful storytelling, immersive sound, and emotive music that builds empathy, understanding, and connection.

Our Audio Stories bring health, care, and social justice themes to life in ways that are deeply human and wonderfully engaging. They don't just share knowledge, they spark conversation, inspire action, and remind people why their voices matter.

Perfect for: learning, reflection, and culture change programmes that need stories to move listening into action.

From £14,950

When your message needs maximum impact, our co-created short films combine professional production with lived experience insight to move hearts and minds, fast.

Transport your audience into someone else's world. In just a few minutes, our short films blend striking visuals, authentic storytelling, and emotional power to spark empathy, connection, and conversation.

Co-created with people with lived experience and performed by professional actors, each film combines authenticity with artistic craft to make every moment count. Designed for maximum reach, our short films create instant impact and lasting change across the health, care, and social justice issues that matter to you.

“That was me, stuck in a cycle of abuse day after day, walking on eggshells in my own home. I reached out. I got the support I needed... and you can too.”

— Participant, Eggshells

Added Value

Every project we create is powered by original, community co-created music, crafted with our partners to bring depth, emotion, and authenticity to every story. It's part of what makes our work truly distinctive and unforgettable.

You'll also receive a bespoke promotional image and three ready to share social media assets to help you celebrate your project, showcase the voices behind it, and share its message far and wide.

"The music is phenomenal: it connected me to the story, from hardship to healing to prosperity."

Who We Work With

Our partners include organisations across health, care, and social justice sectors who want to ensure the people they serve have a real voice in shaping their work, from research and strategy to policy, training, and service delivery.

We help those teams co-create creative outputs that are as professional as they are participatory, as inclusive as they are inspiring, making the arts a tool for empathy, voice, and lasting change.
